

How to Prepare for Your Medical School Interview

One of the most important phases of any medical school application process is your interview. It's your chance to demonstrate how your journey has prepared you for success as a medical student and for a lifelong commitment to excellence in the field of medicine.

We put this quick guide together to help you understand how to prepare to do your best when interviewing for medical school.

INTERVIEWING WITH SGU

At SGU, the admission interview is your opportunity to demonstrate how your journey has prepared you for success as a medical student and for a lifelong commitment to excellence in the field of medicine. Through dialogue with our professional interview team, you are able to explore the lessons you have learned from your challenges and highlight the experiences that will guide you in being a compassionate, dedicated, and outstanding physician.

In preparing for your interview, consider the following for reflection and review. The successful applicant to SGU School of Medicine will have demonstrated these strengths and attributes:

- Strong academic achievement or potential
- Empathy and compassion
- Motivation towards and demonstrated interest in the profession of medicine
- Ability to learn from mistakes or failures
- Critical thinking with problem-solving ability
- Strong communication skills and ability to work in a team
- Resilience and adaptability
- Sense of community responsibility
- Curiosity and dedication to lifelong learning
- Sensitivity and openness to diversity

For further information about applying to SGU or the interview process, please contact admissions@sgu.edu or visit sgu.edu/interview.

REFLECT

- Think about the core reasons you wish to become a physician. This should center your responses throughout the interview.
- Consider what you have done to explore, define, and demonstrate your interest in the field and be prepared to share this with the interviewer.
- Identify how you have persevered through challenges (both personal and academic) and how you would do so in the future.

REVIEW

- Review specific information for the institution.
- Determine if your personal goals and aspirations align with your school of choice.
- Research specific information on the school's website that you can use to further prepare for your interview.

PRACTICE

- Write down your responses to frequently asked questions.
- Practice answering questions aloud. Do you convey the kindness, compassion, and excellence you wish to see in a physician?
- Boost your confidence by confirming access to the interview link (if virtual), location (if in-person), and time/time zone for your appointment in advance.